Foreword

Competitive procedures such as competitions and study commissions enable the evaluation of multiple solutions that best meet architectural, social, design, technical, environmental and economic requirements (Baukultur). They guarantee the comprehensive implementation of sustainability principles.

Competitions in accordance with regulation SIA 142, particularly those conducted as open procedures, are a proven and effective form of procurement for all services in the field of architecture and other planning/design disciplines relevant to Baukultur. The general conditions are conclusively determined. Those participating in such competitions deliver high-quality intellectual work, but only the authors of award-winning projects receive a prize in recognition and appreciation of their outstanding solutions. All participants are entitled to expect a fair procedure and evaluation by an expert jury. Regulation SIA 142 sets out the rules to this end.
